

Tuesday, December 23, 2008

My First Percussion Instruments

I recently just had the chance to review My First Percussion Instruments made by Little First Act Discovery (age appropriate for 6 months and up). Having a musical background, I can certainly appreciate any toy to further a child's discovery of music. This toy also furthers the development of coordination which is also important to baby's development.

This set comes with 3 little instruments: tambourine, castanet, and a maraca. It also came with a great idea book. On one side it shows the instruments and what games you can play with them. On the other side there were several songs that you could sing along with including rhythm patterns. Very cute! I was impressed they were perfectly made to fit tiny hands. The craftsmanship for these toys was good as well. I don't have any concerns that my son may be able to break them (believe me, my son is a ~~destroyer~~).

Percussion from Rebecca Sprouse on Vimeo.
(Please pardon the newborn puppies you hear in the background)

My son absolutely loooooved this toy and would not put it down. I too liked these toys and found myself playing along. These toys are not loud where it may get to be too much or annoying; which is certainly a plus in my house. I would definitely recommend this toy! This is a toy that will grow with baby and continue to aid in development. Having that said, this is certainly a frugal pick! Check out the whole line at <http://littlefirstactdiscovery.com/>