

dec 22, 2008

Musical Toys for Infants and Toddlers

Author: The Domestic Diva | Filed under: Product Reviews, Must-Have, Just for Kids

First on our list of musical fun is the Little First Act Discovery Shake n' Stack Instruments. Its the same stack and sort game that kids know and love but now with a new musical attitude. The fun, vibrant colors and animal characters make this stacking game fun. The base is a tambourine and the stick that holds the animal rings is a maraca so when the kids are having fun stacking they can make music instead. This toy was a big hit with my little one, he loved that it made noise. He even insisted that we include the rings in bathtime for more added fun.

Little First Act Discovery Music Learning Pals is perhaps the cutest little zebra I have ever seen. This little zebra is amazing though because he teaches children letters, numbers, and parts of the body. There are about ten songs that he plays as well so that children can sing and clap along. This is a toy that gets played with constantly in our home. They love the songs and love pushing all the buttons to see what he will do next.

And lastly on our list of fun musical toys for infants and toddlers is this Drop and Play Piano. With the drop and play piano the child drops balls into the mouths of 3 hippos causing them to play music. When they are not using the balls they can simply play the small piano on top. I don't know about your kids but my kids love musical instruments, one example of this love is with this toy. My youngest plays with this piano for long periods of time, happy and content. This toy teaches colors and of course music!