I love multi-tasking gadgets. Just like Alton Brown on the Food Network show, Good Eats, I too require that my gizmos and gadgets serve more than one purpose. That's why the First Act DK1000 Stereo Docking Station for iPod is so appealing. It's two things in one!

This docking station does all that you would expect an iPod dock to do. It charges most iPods and will play your music through it. But that's really just the tip of the iceberg. Because this model is an amp as well. Yes, you read that right. You can actually plug in an acoustic or electric guitar to this thing and play.

That means you can play along with songs on your iPod, if you want. Or, you can just use it as an amp by itself. It does have 40 Watts of RMS power. And the speakers and dynamic tweeters make for a nice addition. You can get the First Act DK1000 Stereo Docking Station for iPod now for $99.99.
